WBAI'S SPECIAL COVERAGE OF CAMPAIGN '96

REPORT

TO THE LISTENER

Valerie Van Isler, General Manager

"DEMOCRACY CAN NOT FUNCTION WITHOUT THE MEDIA"

Nelson Mandela

Just a few days ago, we completed our Fall Membership Campaign for the new fiscal year. During the October drive, you heard some of the strongest programming we have ever done especially around the "drug wars." Your tremendous response helped WBAI make our goal and set another record ($716,000) for this campaign. We especially want to thank you for your generous support which will help us start this new year as a more vital and stronger station.
Here is a summary of the WBAI Budget for Fiscal Year 1997.

In the next few months all of us will face a season of challenges and choices. The presidential and congressional elections this November will result in the usual media frenzy and the usual network "spin" on events. True to our tradition of independent reporting, WBAI will feature special coverage of the real issues involved which are largely ignored by the corporate press. Please tune in to programs like Wake Up Call, TalkBack and Behind the News for some of the best in broadcasting on what's at stake, why and who benefits. Democracy Now, the daily national program anchored by Amy Goodman, has been leading the charge on grassroots coverage all year and will do reports throughout election day. And WBAI's Campaign '96 Special will feature in-depth coverage all night with a panel of guests, local updates and national reports from our News department. This is the time when the media should serve the interest of all people.
This is also a season of holidays with Thanksgiving and Christmas coming up very soon. As you will see in this Folio, many programs are schedule around these themes including an Urban Health Beat Special, All Mixed Up For the Holidays and the traditional ShortCuts Through 1996 with Peter Bochan among many others. The blessings of the season to you your family and loved ones from all of the staff and board at WBAI. And our best wishes for a peacefull, happy holiday.

This is the third Folio that I have produced. I hope that you will find the information relevant and its presentation enjoyable. I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your support of WBAI. I also want to apologize, on behalf of the station,for the errors in our July/August edition. These occurred as a result of several computer/production problems--all of which have since been addressed. I wish to thank those who have contributed time and talent and to encourage you to offer constructive suggestions in what is ultimately, a joint venture.

Jimi Hendrix

Jimi Hendrix has impacted on music in a most unique way. In the minds of many, he was a freak and a wild man. He has been portrayed in ways that make him fit that particular image. What Hendrix was is not elusive. He was genius at work. Hendrix came on the popular music scene like a comet, a blazing fire. His appearance, however, was preceded by years of diligent work honing his skills. He could neither read nor write music, but possessed a well of vision and creativity. His musical strength lay in his ears. He heard sounds. His understanding of music was scientific. Music was nothing more nor more basic than sound. This understanding he brought to the rest of the world. He took some of the ugliest sounds-feedback-and made it most pleasing to the ears. Hendrix had a phenomenal literacy with his instrument. My own perception of this is similar to what we used to say about Pele and a soccer ball. If Hendrix told his guitar to walk it would.

This great and brief life, they seem to go together, we must remember and honor. From Jimi's life we can learn much. The essence of the man is his contribution to our lives in total, the lives he touched, the ones with whom he was intimate, and the fact that he held nothing back. He was humble. He was patient. He was confident of his abilities. We, like him, have something meaningful to give. We too must give it all and in a very unselfish way.

Jimi Hendrix was African and Cherokee. He gracefully lived both heritages with pride, knowledge, and without choice or conflict. By choice I mean that he did not choose one over the other but, upon knowing himself, allowed what he felt and knew to find a secure home and expression in himself.

A brilliant writer as well as a superb guitarist, he explored themes that others are still reluctant to deal with. Listen to his music. Listen to his artistry on the guitar. Listen to his bold expressions of love and desire in Foxy Lady and Manic Depression. Listen to the great ballads of Wait Until Tomorrow and Red House. Protest can be heard in If 6 Was 9, Freedom, and Keep On Pushing. Cherokee Mist, I Don't Live Today, and all the Voodoo titles are rooted in his heritage. He was also one who spoke much of extraterrestials. Who knows? Time will tell. Hendrix firmly believed in the hope of tomorrow. He believed that things will get better. Definitely, it will be no cake walk. We will have to struggle and fight back for that, but fortunately, we have the music to keep us company.

And so that you can say that you have been told- JIMI HENDRIX IS G-O-D. Amen.

Tune in Wednesday November 27 at midnight through Thursday November 28 6:00 A.M., for a special program on Jimi Hendrix and his music.

Host: Habte Selassie.

PROGRAM NOTES

Samori Marksman, Program Director

Our FOLIO editor barged into the Public Affairs Department's office in mid-October-Flipping his pony-tail and jumping from side to side like a madcow — come on, come on This is it Today! This is the FOLIO deadline I gotta have all the copy now!" Of course, this was on the very last day of our 'Drive We were at $670,000 00, aiming at a goal of $700,000 One of the last people we needed to hear from was our beloved, but at this particular moment, not very relevant FOLIO editor We shoved him aside and went about the business of raising $716,000 00 six hours before the deadline

This was to all of us yet another manifestation of the concrete work and direction of our staff, and especially you, listeners and supporters of this station You pushed us beyond the goal of last Fall's Drive by over $85,000 00

We thank you very much

We also thank you because its helps us to meet the goals set out in our Plan-outlined on these same FOLIO pages two and one half years ago Our goal now as was stated then, was to increase our listenership radically improve the station's ability to raise funds and establish this station as a major social force - ranging on matters of social policy, social activism raising the level of intellectual discourse, providing a megaphone and analytical tool on matters of international issues and questions of personal and psychological health - in this broadcast area

Although we've been thankful for everyone s support and are pleased with much of the progress It s important to point out that, great as these achievements may have been, they are but mere steps in our longer journey of seeking to transform this sation into the social issues and aspirations of returns working people and buttressed by the communocratic idea

THE PLAN

We have completed the first two years of our plan We made significant changes Simultaneously, we moved - not only to nurture and develop new ideas but to consolidate changes within the second level three-tier structure, and continue to provide guidance to programs on level three My view has been to 'deconstruct' our programming as follows

Level one — consists of new programs and newly created sub - structures (Our morning show, afternoon and early morning programs and much of the weekend)

-Level Two — focus on ongoing fairly good programs, but which feature materially weak and often unfocused ideas Many of these programs appear in the "Live Radio" and music categories and,

-Level Three — consists mainly of Arts programming much of Live Radio, some fairly new, but "unsupported" concepts and the News department

We are satisfied with the changes we've made But understand that we must move rapidly to the other levels-particularly on level three Over the next three months, significant changes will be made in our Arts and culture department Matthew Finch, our new Arts director, will work with the Program Director to assure that these new changes are fair principled, (positively) constructive and communocratic. With Murillo, Finch, Santiago and yours truly at the collective helm, we envision many positive developments for this station over the next few months

Our goal continues to be one of fulfilling the essence of the Pacifica Radio Foundation It has always been our view to fully cooperate with all aspects of the Foundation - to ensure that it continues to provide the voice for the voiceless: to project the cultures and social aspirations and experiences of those who would ordinarily never have free access to mass media — To continue defending the fundamental human rights of ethnic and racial groups, sexual groupings and the [real] workers on this planet And to struggle for the actualization of the communocratic idea in this business of public and community radio

NEW PROJECT

In November of this year we're proud to announce the beginning of a weekly program on Education. Of course, several of our existing programs have always dealt with the symptoms of our public education system However, this program will bring together teachers, administrative activists, parents and students to deal with all aspects of life from within as well as without,the public education system Basit Umchawi former assistant to chancellor Green and founder of the "alternative' Public School, Freedom Academy, psychologist and teacher Suzanne Ross, administrative activists, Juliet Ucelli and Don Murphy and others will be among the corp of organizers involved in this project Please write to us with your ideas for guests, topics and the like

1997 is the year during which we'll begin a major effort to develop new areas from which WBAI would be able to broadcast-live (for short series of programs) perhaps one week-for a daily program, one month for a weekly program, special events from New Jersey, upstate, New York,Connecticut or even the PRB or any other suggestions Please feel free to write to us-suggesting when and where we might arrange to broadcast from your community
See you on the radio!

WAKE-UP CALL

INTELLIGENT RADIO FOR INTELLIGENT LISTENERS

For the past ten years, Pacifica has been a lonely voice, calling attention to the government's role in international drug trafficking. In November and December, Wake-up Call will continue to explore the involvement of US governmental agencies in the drug trade--including the Contras' drugs-for-arms deals of the '80's; the planned separation of indigenous peoples from their homelands and resources; how under the shadow of narco-trafficking, US police units are being introduced into the Caribbean and the diminishing freedoms of the American people under the pretext of the"war on drugs.

We will pay close attention to the case of Kemba N. Smith, a 24-year-old woman who because of her association with a low-level drug dealer is currently serving a 24 year mandatory minumum sentence in a Connecticut prison. Kemba neither used nor sold drugs.

Also, stay tuned for post-election coverage and reports on health, welfare reform, police abuses and brutality, child custody issues, the environment, attacks on the rights of immigrants and an update on Morese Bickham, who was released from Louisiana's Angola Prison in January--having served 38 years for an act of self-defense.
Start your day with the morning show crew. Enjoy great music, news updates, arts and culture and thought-provoking discussions.

LEON SHENANDOAH

LEADER OF THE IROQUOIS CONFEDERACY

Leon Shenandoah, head of the Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy, passed on July 22, 1996 at Syracuse University Hospital.

The news of this great man passing spread out from the center of the seat of the Six Nations Grand Council at the Onondaga Nation in waves of shock followed by waves of grief and finally profound sadness. So many things are brought into focus when events such as these occur.

Shenandoah, who opposed Indians' involvement in gambling to raise money, lived most of his life on the Onondaga Nation reservation, just south of Syracuse.

Thatata-ho was old, 81, but hardly ancient. National obituaries said his passing on was preceded by a lengthy illness. I hadn't heard that, but that was not surprising either. Perhaps it is that we often forget or neglect everything that isn't right in front of us and thus realities like death shock. Or maybe one can never be ready for the finality of death. I could not recall the last time I saw him, but I do remember him as always old because that is how I met him 20 years ago. Others will remember him as they knew him.

Thatata-ho (called Tadadaho in Onondaga) is the title conferred upon a man selected under Kayantlako-wa, the Great Law of the Six Nations Confederacy, to preside over all meetings of the Grand Council, among other responsibilities. The Grand Council is the body that is comprised of all condoled Chiefs or Sachems of each of the constituent nations, 50 in all. The Nations of the Hotinuhsu-ni are the Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga, Seneca and Tuscarora.

The importance of Thatata-ho transcends the man, as stated in Kayantlakowa. Not just a religious or political leader or titular headman, Thatata-ho is the embodiment of the Traditional Six Nations law, culture and heritage, who presides over all formal activities of the Grand Council. In that sense, Thatata-ho's position is similar to a combination of those of the Pope, the Rabbi of the Lubavitch Movement and the Dalai Lama in the respect they command, but much more.

The Six Nations is neither a movement nor a religion. Neither is it just a political entity although as an aboriginal body politic it continues to meet the international legal definitions of Nation. Thatata-ho appeared numerous times before recognized international institutions such as the United Nations and the European Union, in the Hague, Netherlands, and the World Indigenous Environmental Conference in Brazil. At these, he steadfastly and with consummate articulation held to the spirit and directives of Kayantlako-wa, the Great Law. The constituent nations of the Hotinuhsu-ni retain independent Nation status that is confirmed by their continued co-alliance within the structure of the Grand Council. Like most indigenous organizations, these formal alliances do not fit neatly into American concepts of nationality nor does Thatata-ho fit American concepts of leadership.

Thatata-ho is the head chief of the Grand Council. The first Thatata-ho represented the arrival of the Great Law, Kayantlako-wa, and its acceptance by the individual nations and their commitment to its provisions over 500 years ago. The Great Law recites the various relationships and duties of all Hotinushu-ni. Representatives of each Nation is set forth in the Law which is recited orally each year in Six Nations communities. Fifty Chiefs representing the Six Nations assemble as required to address issues facing the people. Thatata-ho presides over all meetings of the Grand Council as both a symbol of orderly discussions and continuity, respect and adherence to the Great Law.

The Great Law is an enigma to most non-Indians because its existence is kept alive by oral tradition even though hundreds, if not thousands, of books and articles have been written to translate and interpret it. The irony for Indian people, Hotinushu-ni especially, is that no quantity of writing, however complicated or learned, grants the least authority to the Great Law. That authority is embodied by those such as Leon Shenandoah who live its teachings and present them to the future, intact and as powerful as they were hundreds of years ago. Leon Shenandoah has passed on to the next existence and has left us the responsibility to carry on as he did.

Leon Shenandoah was a civil and gentle man, a son, brother, uncle, nephew, father, husband, grandfather and friend, as well as a leader to his community that extended out from his charismatic presence wherever he was. Though soft spoken there was never doubt about the strength of his commitment to his family, community and responsibility and his willingness to express traditional values and exercise the formal responsibilities of his title. The example he set by his life made Leon a living repository of law, history and quiet human dignity as he represented the Six Nations in the United States and throughout the world.

Indian country deeply feels the loss of great traditional leaders, like Leon Shenandoah, when they pass on. Presently, we are in a time of great distraction as Indian people. A time of cultural peril, Leon knew that. Those who hear are listening across time as the words of the ancestors come trough the mouths of people like Leon from thousands of years of living. Those who are too busy to understand tradition are glib in their interpretation of it and quick to give lip service to "our ways" but live and express the values that Leon fought against his whole life.

In 1992, Shenandoah participated in the World Conference of Indigenous Peoples in Rio de Janeiro, where he and Amazon leaders shared tobacco, corn, prayers and suggestions on how to deal with white politicians.

Of course, we will grieve and mourn. Then we will give thanks that such a man as Leon Shenandoah lived, that he was found worthy to accept the responsibility conferred upon him as the Thatata-ho, and that he carried his title and work with dignity and accomplishment, that he was an inspiration to those who knew him and that he will continue to inspire through our oral representations of his good work, quiet humor and gentle wit.

His great power was in his convictions and commitment to his responsibility both as defined in the Great Law, Kayantlako wa and universal humanity.

Survivors include his wife Thelma, sons, Leon Jr., Duane, Raymond, Irwin, Gary and Jerome, daughter Lorie, brother Edward, sister Alice Papineau and Phoebe Hill, all of the Onondaga Nations; 34 grandchildren and 20 great grandchildren.

PACIFICA RADIO AND THE COUNTERCULTURE

During the sixties, the Pacifica Foundation, a national network of public radio stations founded in 1946, was at the forefront of the counterculture movement, with stations in New York, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, as well as other markets. These stations were precursors to commercial "underground" FM radio (AOR), with guests (and avid listeners) including the likes of Abbie Hoffman, Bob Dylan, and Arlo Guthrie. The panel, made up of past and present Pacifica personalities and management, will discuss Pacifica's role in the counterculture movement of the sixties, its impact on commercial FM radio, and its importance in the nineties as an alternative form of radio.

LATINO JOURNAL

Produced by: Santiago Nieves

"LATINO JOURNAL CELEBRATES PUERTO RICAN HISTORY MONTH" with premiere of new "QUE PASA", ARTS, CULTURE AND ENTERTAINMENT SEGMENT"

Back in 1976 Santiago Nieves, a Puerto Rican filmmaking student and journalist wanted to do something about the negative stereotyping or virtual invisibility of Latinos in the media. The idea became Latino Journal. Today, the journal celebrates more than two decades of progressive Latino programming, making it radio's longest-running Latino program of it's kind.

Words used by our listeners in letters to the journal include "provocative", "hard-hitting", "informative", "irreverent". Recent topics include AIDS, abortion, anti-immigration legislation, local, regional and national elections, Latino stereotypes in the media. Latino gays and lesbians activism. The journal has covered social justice issues, including the explosive aftermath of the acquital of Police Officer Livoti in the killing of Anthony Baez, and the question of Puerto Rican Nationhood.

In November we celebrate Puerto Rican History month, by officially premiering the Journal's new Que Pasa, arts, culture, literature and entertainment section, including the Best Picks for the upcoming week. Santiago Nieves along with Angelica Aquino and Walter Krochmal will cover some exciting and interesting events, and offer critiques and reviews of general and Latino culture.

Throughout November look for our coverage of the Central South American Latino New York and Colombian Film Festival; an interview with Abelardo Estorino, Cubano Nobel Prize winner in literature for his book on 19th century African slaves in Cuba; Dominican writer, Junot Diaz and his best-seller Drown; The New York premier of Gayumba, a Dominican theatre company; a tribute to Puerto Rican salsa great Hector Lavoe and Afro-Cuban Jazz maestro, the late Mario Bauza, featuring one of the last interviews recorded with Bauza, and much, much more.So tune into Latino Journal, radio's longest-running Latinos news program. FREEDOM

IS A CONSTANT STRUGGLE

This year marks the 30th Anniversary of the founding of the Center for Constitutional Rights. In commemoration of this event and in the spirit of the freedom fighter of the 1960s, the Center organized a Freedom Ride to important historic sites throughout the South.

According to Errol Maitland, producer of Wake-up Call and Emanations in many of these places it is clear that the struggle continues. Maitland and his son, Kobie, were among the 30 participants who journeyed along routes which took them to Chapel Hill where the University of North Carolina housekeepers, who are 88% African American, struggle for a living wage; to Spartanburg, South Carolina, where Maitland's son Douglas, was killed last year; and to the dreaded Mississippi State Prison where over the past few years there have been dozens os suspicious deaths of incarcerated African-American males.

The Freedom Riders also visited Tuskegee Institute, The Edmund Pettus Bridge Memorial in Selma and The Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, in Alabama. The National Center in Knoxville and the Harper's Ferry historical areas were also stops on the journey. The riders also visited some of the sites of burned Black churches.

The Center for Constitutional Rights is a non-profit legal organization which focuses on the use of law for social change. As in the previous 30 years, the Center continues to provide legal support to individuals and social movements whose Constitutional rights have been infringed upon or denied.

Sunday, November 3, Back of the Book In an infomercial health segment Itchy T. Echidna interviews a curiously familiar Doctor Bilious T. Slugbladder Ph.D. who, as part of his work release program, is pushing his latest health invention: The All-Juice Diet. Along with his extremely expensive series of books titled "Curing Everything You've Ever Gotten And Preventing Everything You've Ever Heard Of" the plea bargaining Doctor/Attorney/Guru is also pushing his revolutionary Super Juicer for a mere $150 more than he's already gouged you for on the books. Patrons of the video portion of our program will see that the juicer consists of two blocks of wood with instructions for the placing of the to-be-juiced object between them and application of Block A to Block B. The Dippy Doc is enthusiastic about tobacco juice made from politically correct Cuban cigars.

Sunday, November 17, Back of the Book It was merely four seasons ago when the video-serial portion of our program "The Deadly Cult of the Tocks Tap" aired, and began its insidious conversion to reality. Our hero Little Squishy has been attempting to alert the nation to the effect the cult's removal of part of the electromagnetic spectrum would have. But it's hard for people to figure out what would happen if the tocks were removed from every tick-tock of time. So Little Squishy is using his special word processor program that has the added feature of making his ink-jet printer spray ink all over the place, but he's finally found the command Do-U'ndo INKSLOB Will this be enough to let people know what's going on? If not, you may never know.

Class in Session:
WBAI's Education Report.

Tune in to this new series of special reports on the state of education today in New York City and across the nation. The WBAI Public Affairs Department will examine issues ranging from education cuts and school overcrowding to alternative high schools and multicultural education with a team of progressive educators, child advocates, journalists and students. With the ongoing crisis facing our city's schools, this program comes at a much needed time. Be sure to tune in. Our future is at stake.

WALDEN'S POND FIRST ANNUAL TOFURKEY FEAST.

Thursday, November 28th
2:00pm to 6:00pm

Let us give thanks today to Shelton Walden, who will make us re-think how and why we celebrate Thanksgiving Day the way we do. Before you gobble up that bird and wolf down that high-fat pumpkin pie, Shelton will raise a series of questions relating to nutrition, health, culture and consumerism with special guests and music. Be sure to listen to this program so that you'll be making a dash for the Lentil-loaf instead of the Peptol Bismol!

predict that the 1994, Spring Offensive (for him to find a Significant Other) is still ongoing and as successful (!) as ever. Never mindful of the season, The Deadly Cult of the Tocks Tap is now attempting to journey back in time to prevent those bits of history that it finds inconvenient. Will Little Squishy's parents be interrupted at a crucial moment? Are any Charters going to be de-written? Perhaps the cult will stop attacking when it says it's retreating.

Sunday, December 15, Back of the Book
Preparations for the filthy, stinking holiday season are underway everywhere, and at the WBAI canteen there are reindeer on the walls and fat guys in red suits saying "Ho-Ho-Ho" all over the place. Of course those are actually chunks of reindeer embedded in the walls, the unfortunate results of some of WBAI's French Chef Merde Zut's "Northern Surprise" gustatorial experiment a few years back when fusion reactors were used in an attempt to generate the aurora borealis. Those guys in the red suits are the HAZ-MAT team attempting to decontaminate the WBAI canteen from the latest disastrous holiday serving of elf hams marinated in a Management sauce. Your non-theist host will attempt to get through all of this superstition without knocking over any Xmas trees.

Sunday, December 29, Back of the Book In two more days your host will take his annual shower, which he takes whether he needs it or not. This is, of course, considered excessive by the WBAI Hygiene Dept. As we type this in we don't know what changes may take place in January. Will the Deadly Cult of the Tocks Tap triumph? Will Little Squishy disappear down a memory hole? Hector and Anvil interview a Chef Slugbladder who is plugging his new dessert craze — chocolate covered cabbage. Pope Weaselpenis XVI talks to Santa Claus about their plans to be co-keynote speakers at the next NAMBLA conference. When questioned by a journalist about the age of the youngest person he's ever had sex with Santa replies 212 inkslob.

Empty Echoes

Finding silent spaces
no words escape
Thoughts locked in brain reverberating against the hollow insides of skull Sending empty echoes to already saturated sponges

Too many voices call all at once
Nothing rises from ash Tinny metal tunes dance in off beat rhythms to the sound of empty echoes

Too many call out -- shout to never be heard Too many whispers
in dark places.
Closet corners
trapping souls.

Too many words -- trapped in empty places silent spaces
no way out Too many souls cry out for hands of rescue that never come

Too many bones rattle in far off lands
Mile high pile of skeletal remains Remains in the passage of nostrils

the acrid smell of burnt flesh wafting forever into memory and constant recall.

Loud voices scream their way into prominence Rotting flesh of peasants fill the air Methodical thud of heart beat about to stop.
Thud, thud, thud, thu

Curled in tight daytime bonds kept company by night-time creatures Words do not explain do not erase do not flow into day to be heard to seek justice
To Be

Words trapped forever in the silent spaces
in dark places
in the open fields of tinny metal tunes of empty echoes
